PREFACE.

IN gathering the material for a dictionary of the Latin inscriptions, I have felt that it was the work of a pygmy struggling against a giant. The number of these inscriptions now published, over 200.000, with an annual accretion of many hundreds, is so vast that the preparation of a dictionary of epigraphical Latin should rightly be the joint work of the Latinists of all the world. Such a project, however, has not yet been broached; its fulfilment, therefore, would be a matter of many years. In the meantime the student of epigraphy finds himself at a loss, in matters phonetic and lexicographical, if not archaeological as well; for the indices of the CORPUS furnish him only with the notabilia of the inscriptional vocabulary, and these are very meagerly supplemented by the indices of the several Syllogae such as Orelli-Henzen and Wilmanns, while the Dizionario Epigrafico of de Ruggiero is wholly archaeological in character, and the great new Thesaurus Linguae Latinae by no means exhausts the vocabulary of the inscriptions.

The basis of the present work is the CORPUS INSCRIPTIONUM LATINARUM, which now includes about 165000 inscriptions. This enormous lexical material has been worked through with great care, and I trust that the citations from the CORPUS will be found fairly complete and representative. The Christian inscriptions of Rome have been excluded from the CORPUS, and hence have not yet been collected in a single work and carefully edited. This is extremely unfortunate, as they best represent the popular Latin of the period of linguistic decay, and furnish therefore a rich store of material for the students of Romance philology. To me it is a source of particular regret, because such citations as I can gather from the older works and from scattered modern sources will become obsolete as soon as the inevitable Corpus of Christian inscriptions makes its appearance. I think, however, that I have been able to examine and include the great majority of published Christian inscriptions. My critics will perhaps pardon omissions under this and other heads, in consideration of the difficulties involved; they will also recognize the utter impossibility of any attempt at text-criticism in a work of this kind. I have accepted the inscriptions largely as published; if later one is proved false or badly read or interpolated, the fault lies with the editor of the inscription, not with me.

The scope of the Dictionary includes geographical and mythological names, but not those of living or historical persons; with the exception that I have admitted old biblical proper names, as AARON, ABRAHAM, which, without regard to biblical interpretation, very properly take their place with the names of classical and oriental mythology.

My sources, in general, with the abbreviations employed, are appended below; other citations will be so complete as to require no explanation. Where the inscription is derived from the CORPUS, it is cited by number only: thus XIV 2106 refers to C. I. L. XIV 2106.

A

A. I. The first letter of the Latin alphabet; appears often in abecedaria, whole or partial, carved on stone and scratched or painted on walls, vases, tiles etc. [Cf. Dieterich, ABC-Denkmäler, Rhein. Mus. (1901) p. 77 sg.] Exx.: (a) carved on stone. VI 6831, 22639, 29849 (6th cent.) in Rome; V 3892 (Verona); X 8064 (Drepanum); AE. Mitth. (1881) p. 124 no. 16 = Pais no. 218 (Aquileia); III 11186 (Carnuntum), 13569 (Lyttus), 14368³⁴ (Ovilava, Noricum); VIII 3317 (Lambaesis, where AA, BB, CC etc.); Eph. Epig. IX p. 78 no. 206 (Italia) — (b) scratched or painted on walls. VI 3074 (Rome, excubitorium coh. VII vig.); IV 2514-2549^c and 3206-3222 (Pompeii); XI 2887 (Volsinii); III 11291 (Carnuntum) — (c) scratched on tiles. III p. 962 (Savaria), 8077¹⁰ (Dacia), 11453 (Carnuntum), 11469 (Agram mus.); Bramb. 110 (Hollendoorn, Holland) — (d) scratched on vases. Becker, Mainz. Mus. p. 110 (Moguntiacum), Wd. Z. XII (1893) p. 201 (Aug. Trevirorum) — (e) on lead. Haverfield, Rom. Inscr. Brit. (1890-1) p. 16 no. 93 (Lydney).

II. The letters A-H (litterae nundinales) were adopted in the Julian calendar (fasti anni Juliani) to denote the eight days of the Roman week. [Cf. Marquardt, Röm. Staatsverwaltung, III p. 289; Bruns, Fontes, pp. 41-44]. Such calendars were carved or painted and placed on the walls of public and private buildings in Rome and the municipia, of which many specimens, dating between 31 B. C. and 50 A. D., have been found. Exx.: Fasti Pinciani (Rome, bet. 723/31 and 725/29): I p. 298; I² p. 219; VI 2294, 32481 — *F. Synopsis of arrangement.

I. FORMS.

II. UNUSUAL CONSTRUCTIONS. (a) With accusative. (b) With genitive. (c) AB before consonants. (d) A before vowels. (e) Joined with following word.

III. USE. (A) Local. (a) denoting separation, source, motion away from, dependent on verbs, trans. and intrans. (b) denoting 'voluntary agent' (and, by extension, involuntary agent), with passive verbs. (c) dependent on the verbal force in nouns. (d) dependent on adjectives and adverbs. (e) adverbial phrases, expressing distance from point to point (corresponding to ad, usque ad, etc.). (f) Denoting location or domicile. (g) In functions, public and private. (h) Adverbial formulas, etc. Miscellaneous. — (B) Temporal.

I. FORMS. A' = long A, freq. everywhere. AA = long A: AA CETEREIS, I 202, 2, l. 29 (Lex. Corn. de XX Quaest., B.C. 81) — AP: AP VIA, II 4926 (Tarracensis) — ABS and APS (only before te): ABS TE, X 2496 (Puteoli); APS TE, XI 1129 (Forum Novum), IX 384 (Canusium), V² 8515 (Aquileia) — AF: AF CAPVA, I 551 = X 6950 (Polla, B.C. 132); AF VOBIS, I 201, l. 11 = XIV 3584 (*Epist. II. CONSTRUCTIONS:

(a) With accusative: often in Rome, elsewhere only in Italy, Africa, Spain. Exx.: In Rome, AB AEDM, VI 2234; A CAPVT AFRICAE, VI 8984, 8985 (2nd), 8986 (3^d); A CAPVT AFRICAS, VI 8983 (2nd); A CENSVS, VI 1878, 8513, 8937; AB CONSERVAS PEDISEQVAS, VI 4355 (1st); AB EPOLYTVM FOSSORE, Rossi I 662 (5th); AB HEREDES MEOS, VI 9258; AB HORTV(M) NOV(VM), VI 8670; AB INDICES, VI 3414; AB ISEM PELAGIAM, VI 8707 (1st); A LATVS, VI 15163; A FOSSORIBVS BVRDONE ET MICINVM, Rossi I 653 (5th); A MVNERA, VI 7612 (1st); AB OMNES, VI 11005; A PONTIFICES, VI 2963; A POMTITICES (sic), VI 10791 (2nd); A PVLVINAR, VI 9136 (1st); A SPECVLVM, VI 7297 (1st); A SPEM VETERE, Eph. Epig. I p. 218 (1st); A SVCESSVM, Boldetti, Osserv. p. 265; A TEMPESTATM, VI 13099 (2nd); A TRITONES, VI 8684 — In Italy: A CENSVS, XIV 4010 (Ficulea); A GADES, XI 3281, 3282, 3283 (Aquae Apollinares); A MVTHVNIVM, IV 1940 (Pompeii, graffito); A NVCIAM, X 6954 (Campania, 3^d); A PVLVINAR, IV 2155 (Pompeii); A VII CAESARES, XIV 2886 (Praeneste, 1st) — In Africa: AB ARAS (sic, to avoid the phrase AB AD ARAS), VIII 10432, 10435, 10437, 10438 (Ad Aras, 3^d); A FVNDAMENTA, VIII 9010 (Maur. Caes., 4th); AB HOSTEM, VIII 14603 (Simitthus, 1st); AB ORIENTEM, VIII 2728 (Lambaesis, 2nd); AB ORIGINEM, VIII 2660 (ibid. 3^d); A RIGOREM, VIII 2728 (ibid. 2nd); A TACAPAS, VIII 10022 (Africa) — In Spain: A COMMVNIONEM S(AN)C(TA)M, Hübner. Hisp. 336 (Emerita, 7th); AB EPISCOPVM IENNADIVM, ibid. 469 (A.D. 913).

(b) With genitive. (A Graecism). Very seldom. Exx.: GALATAE FILIO AB DANAHEs (sic), VI 18846 (Rome); A VIRVNI, III 5728 (Noricum, 3^d, a milestone). Perhaps III 347 = 6996 (Bithynia, 3^d); A PRVSAE which is probably gen., though the editors assign it to a nom. PRVSAIS. — With ellipsis of AEDE, TEMPLO or the like it is regular. Exx. in Rome: VI 2234: FANATICO AB ISIS SERAPIS (sic); 32462: AB ISIS ET SERAPIS; XV 252 (2nd): AB ISIS; VI 2226: AB CYCLOPIS (sc. ANTRO).

(c) AB before consonants. Latin grammarians lay down the rule that A should be used before consonants, AB before vowels and H. In the inscr. there are numberless exceptions to the former rule, but few to the latter. [Note that in the Pompeian wax-tablets, IV 3340, AB is freq. before vowels and consonants, while A is not found]. In inscr., AB is found before every consonant in the alphabet. Cf. Spanish amphorae pictae, XV 3976, 4371 (Rome, 2nd). — In Gaul, XIII 1910 (Lugdunum); XII 1981, 5691⁵ (Vienna). — In Britain, VII 1310 (Verulamium). — AD is rarely abbreviated A. EXX.: VI 10562, 18312 (Rome), V² p. 945 (Alburnus Maior, 159). Note: at a late period AD is corrupted to A, as Le Blant N. R. no. 323 (Mandourel): A DEO ONOREM (sic).

(b) Construction. AD is consistently followed by the acc. [Note: in VIII 9998 (Africa): PERTENEBIT (sic) AT (sic) LIBERTOS LIBERTABVSQVE POSTERI[S]QVE EORVM, the writer has passed from the acc. after AD to the common dat. formula LIBERTIS LIBERTABVSQVE etc.; in VIII 12120 (Prov. Byzac.): AD MISERABILE MORTIS, perhaps a word has fallen out]. Apparent exceptions are probably only corruptions of the acc. termination. (Cf. Diehl, De M. Finali Epigr. pp. 56-63). (2) Especially as title of two legions, LEGIO PRIMA (I) ADIVTRIX and LEGIO SECUNDA (II) ADIVTRIX, in sense of "subordinate", "auxiliary", as both legions were drafted into the army from the non-Roman classarii, and did not rank with the cives Romani of the regular legions. When they were later raised to the grade of citizen-soldiery (legionarii proper), the name ADIVTRIX was retained, in sense (1) of "assistant". [Cf. de Ruggiero, Diz. Epigr. s. v.]. Extremely freq. in inscrr. everywhere, notably Pannonia and the neighboring provinces, and Germany. Additional epithets:

ANIENSIS aqua. See ANNESIS.

ANIENSIS tribus, a tribus rustica, one of the 35 tribes of Roman citizens; instituted, along with the TERETINA q. v., by the censors of 455/299. Originally it comprised parts of the lands of the northern Hernici and the Aequi along the upper course of the Anio, whence its name. After the Social War, the newly formed Latin coloniae of Carsioli in the Aequian territory and Ariminum and Cremona in northern Italy were assigned to this tribe; and in the Julian-Augustan period other cities of northern Italy, Spain, and Gaul, and Alexandria Troas in Asia. (See below.). The word ANIENSIS, like ARNENSIS q. v., is treated as an adj. and declined (nom., gen., dat. sing., dat. plur.), and forms part of the citizen's name, standing regularly between filiation and cognomen. ANIO, gen ANIENIS. A deep, swift-running stream, rising in the Hernican highlands near Treba Augusta, flowing west northwest, receiving above Varia (Vicovaro) the waters of the Digentia (Licenza), falling in cascades under Tibur (praeceps Anio, Hor.), and after a zigzag course thru the Campagna Romana, emptying into the Tiber near Antemnae, about three miles from Rome; the acque-ducts named from the river, Anio (Vetus), Anio Novus. [Cf. ANNESIS.]

[Forms, ANNIO, VI 2344 = 8493, 2345 (Rome). — Abbrev., ANI., VI 1243 a, b, e, f., 31558 (Rome), XIV 4079 (loc. in-cert. agri Rom.), 4080 (near Tibur)].

A. The river. VI 17876 = Carm. Lat. 842 (Rome, frgmt.): CONDIDIT IN FLVCT[VS QVEM FATA DEDE]RE ANIENIS; IX 4051 (Carsoli, 4th): [DONAN]DO FORMAS AD ANIENIS FL[VENTA].

B. The aqueduct Anio (Vetus), the second of Rome's great aqueducts, constructed in 272-270 B. C. by the censors M' Curius Dentatus and L. Papirius Cur-sor. The water was drawn from the Anio near the Monastery of S. Cosimato oppo-site Mandela, about 43 miles from Rome, followed the course of the river on its left side in an underground channel, descended below Tibur in the direction of Gallicano, crossed the Campagna and entered Rome ad Spem Veterem near the Porta Praenestina (Maggiore), after which it followed the line of the Servian wall and agger to the Porta Esquilina (later Arcus Gallieni, di S. Vito). Cippi terminales, VI 1243 a, b, e, f, 31558 (Rome, 1st), XIV 4079 (loc. incert., 1st), 4080 (Tibur, 1st): ANI.; VI 2344 = 8493 (Rome): SOTER SERVOS PVBLCVS, CASTELAR(IVS) AQVAE ANNIONIS (sic) VETERIS; VI 2345 (Rome): LAETVS PVBLCVS POPVLI ROMANI [...], AQVARIVS AQVAE ANNIONIS (sic) VETERIS CASTELLI VIAE LATINAE CONTRA DRACONES.

C. The aqueduct Anio Novus, begun, along with the Claudia q. v., by Caligula in A. D. 38 and finished by Claudius in 52. Its source (from the Anio, or neighboring springs) was at the 42nd milestone of the Via Sublacensis, near Sublaqueum; it followed the course of the Anio valley, mainly under ground, to Tibur, thence south and into the plain of the Campagna, where near le Capannelle its specus was carried over that of the Aqua Claudia, and they entered Rome together over the Porta Praenestina (Maggiore), near which their waters were mingled and distributed. VI 1256 (Rome, 52): ANIENEM NOVAM A MILLIARIO LXII SVA IMPENSA IN VRBEM PERDVENDAM CVRAVIT (Claudius); VI 3865 = 31945 (Rome, 381): IMMINE[NTEM RVINAM ... AQVAE] ANIENIS N[OVAE].

C. The Legio XV Apollinaris, enrolled under Augustus, probably in 6 A. D. for the Pannonian campaign; quartered in Pannonia where it joined in the mutiny of A. D. 14. From 63 to 71 it took part in Corbulo's campaign against the Parthians and afterwards in the Jewish wars under Titus, after which it returned to Pannonia and made its headquarters at Carnuntum where it engaged in the construction of a permanent encampment (A. D. 73); but at some time later was draughted off again to the East (at Satala on the borders of Armenia Minor), where it disappears from view in inscr. toward the middle of the third century. The honorific title PIA FIDELIS appears in a single inscr., XIII 1680 (Ara Romae et Augusti, 3^d). The greater number of inscr. (esp. tiles) come from Carnuntum and its neighborhood. III. Places named after Apollo.

1. Apollonos Hydreuma = Ἀπόλλωνος Ἰδρεῦμα, name of one of the watering-stations (ὕδρευματα) on the highroad in the dry-lands between Berenike on the coast of Egypt (Red Sea) and Coptos on the Nile; now Wadi-Hafeiri. III 6627 (Coptos): LACCI (i. e. ὕδρευματα 'reservoirs') AEDIFICATI ET DEDICATI SVNT APOLLONOS HYDREUMA VII K(ALENDAS) IANVAR(IAS).

2. Area Apollinis, on the Palatine Hill in Rome, a large space which Augustus set apart for the cult of Apollo and the service of the Court, including the Domus Augustana, Templum (Aedes) Apollinis, Area Palatina etc. VI 32327 (Rome, Comm. Lud. Saec., 204) l. 23: IN PALATIO IN AREA APOLLINIS.

3. Bybliotheca Latina Apollinis founded by Augustus along with a Bybliotheca Graeca in the area Apollinis near the Palatine temple of Apollo. VI 5884 (Rome):

ANTIOCHVS TI. CLAVDI CAESARIS A BYBLIOTHECA LATINA APOLLINIS.

4. Vicus Apollinis, a street on the Palatine, leading to the Temple of Apollo. VI 975 (Rome, 136) a col. 2 l. 16: VICO APOLLINIS.

5. Ager Apollinis Argentei, in Rome, evidently taking its name from a silver statue. VI 2233 (Rome): MONVMENTVM FECIT INTERIVS AGRO APOLLINIS ARGENTEI; VI 29967 (Rome): AB APOLLINE ARGENTEO.

6. Diaeta Apollinis, apparently somewhere near the modern Piazza Vittorio Emanuele on the Esquiline, Rome. VI 29774 (Rome): GESTATIO CIRCINI A DI(A)ETA APOLLINIS AD DI(A)ETA(M) EANDEM IN CIRCVITV P(EDES) (tot).

7. Figlinae ab Apollini (sic), at Ostia. XV 2156 (Ostia a brick): DE FIGL[IN]IS GRATIAE AB APOLLINI.

8. *Apollinis lavatio, or balneum*, at Lugudunum. XIII 1983 (Lugudunum): TV QVI LEGIS, VADE IN APOLINIS (sic) LAVARI.

IV. As name of several triremes in the fleets at Misenum and Ravenna. VI 3139 = 7466 (Rome): (ille) MIL(ES) CL(ASSIS) PR(AETORIAE) MIS(ENATIS) III (= triere) APOLIN(E) (sic). Similarly X 3383, 3471, 3527 (Misenum), XI 101, 109 (Ravenna).

APOLLONIA. A town of southern Phrygia near the borders of Pisidia, east of Apamea Cibotus in the direction of Antiochia Pisidiae; now Uluburlu. On milestones, III 319 (Ancyra, 2nd), 6965, 6969 (Pisidia, 4th): APOLLONIA, M(ILIA) P(ASSVVM) (tot); and on a laterculus praetorianorum, VI 2386 = 32625 (Rome): AVR(ELIVS) MARCVS, D(OMO) APOL(LONIA). [N. b. The identification of the last with Apollonia in Phrygia is uncertain].

APOLLONIANVS. "Former slave of Apollonius", as cognomen. VI 8920 (Rome, 1st): T. FL(AVIVS) AVG(VSTI) LIB(ERTVS) APPOLLONIANVS (sic).

APOLLONIDEA. (Sic, the Latin form derived from the ethnic Apollonides). A town of Lydia, west of Thyatira, between Sardes and Pergamum, properly Apollonis (Ἀπολλωνίς). Ruins at Palamüt. X 1624 (Puteoli, 30): APOLLONIDEA, in list of towns destroyed by the earthquake of 17 A. D. and restored at the expense of Tiberius.

APOLLONOS HYDREVMA. See s. v. APOLLO § III 1.

APONENSIS. Of the Aquae Aponi, near Patavium. [Cf. APONVS]. Notiz. (1896) p. 317 = Dessau 5241 (bet. Ateste and Patavium): (illi) CALAMAYLAE APONESI (sic).

APONIANI horti, in Rome, an estate or park, possibly in the district trans Tiberim; site not known. VI 671 = 30808 (Rome): (ille) D(ONO) D(EDIT) HORTIS APONIANIS ARAM MARMOREAM CVM SVO SIBI SIGILLO SILVANI.

APONIVS. Evidently name of a divinity; has been connected, without sufficient proof, with the local medicinal deity of the Aquae Aponi (now Abano), near Patavium. [Cf. APONVS]. VIII 10615 (Prov. Procons.): APONIO VALERIVS DIOCLETIANVS V(OTVM) S(OLVIT) <L(AETVS)> L(IBENS) <M(ERITO)>.

APONVS. Local divinity of the medicinal hot springs Aquae Aponi (now Abano), near Patavium. Only in the dedication A. A., which may be interpreted as Aquis Aponi or Apono Augusto. V 5585 (Patavium): A. A. (ille); V 8990 (ibid.): (ille) A. A.; V 3101 (Vicetia): A. A. ... (ille) VOTO; V 2787 (Patavium): A. A. DICAVIT (talia): V 2790 (ibid.): A. A. APVLIA. A region of Italy (now le Puglie), extending between the Apennines and the Adriatic, from the river Tiferus (now Tiferno) on the north to Calabria and Lucania (river Bradanus, now Bradano) on the south. Its chief towns were Aecae, Arpi, Ausculum, Barium, Canusium, Genusia, Gnathia, Herdonia, Larinum, Luceria, Rubi, Salapia, Sipontum, Teanum Apulum, Venusia. In the administrative reorganization of Italy under Augustus, Apulia was united with Calabria to form the Regio II Apulia et Calabria. In the second century the united district, sometimes with jurisdiction extended over other regions, was governed by iuridici; later by correctores.

APVLVM. An important town and military headquarters of Dacia Apulensis (q. v.), seat of the civil and military government of the district; situated on the river Marisia (Marosh) where it receives the waters of the stream Ompoly [Cf. Ampevlm], on the highway between Sarmizegetusa and Porolissus; now Károly-Fejérvár, Germ. Karlsburg. The settlement that, after Trajan's conquest of Dacia, grew up about the encampment of the Legio XII Gemina retained the simple name of Canabae (Kanabae) [See CANABAE] until, toward the end of the reign of M. Aurelius (ca. 180?), the town was raised to the rank of a municipium with the name of Apulum (Mun. Aurelium Apulum), and the old name of Canabae was lost. At the same time, a colonia was established there (Col. Aurelia Apulum), and municipal and colonial administration continued side-by-side. Septimius Severus conferred upon the citizens the ius Italicum, and his name was incorporated in that of the town: Municipium Septimium Apulum. The place, with all Dacia, was abandoned by the Romans under Gallienus, in 257.

E. Aqueducts and water-courses, public and private, with definite names.

At Rome.

(1). Aqua Appia, the earliest aqueduct of Rome, built in 312 B. C. by the censors Appius Claudius Caecus and C. Plautius Venox, with its source in the Campagna Romana east of Rome, in a farm (ager Lucullanus) on a cross-road (diverticulum) to the left of the Via Collatina between the sixth and seventh milestones. Its springs may still be seen at the bottom of a quarry at a farmhouse called La Rustica. It entered Rome ad Spem Veterem near the (later) Porta Praenestina (Maggiore), and thence was carried to the Salinae outside the Porta Trigemina. I p. 287 no. XXVIII = I² p. 192 no. X = XI 1827 (Arretium, elogium): APPIVS CLAVDIVS C. F. CAECVS CENSOR ... IN CENSURA AQVAM IN VRBEM ADDVXIT.

(2.) Aqua Anio (Vetus). See s. v. ANIO § B, ANNESIS.

(3). Aqua Marcia, the third of Rome's great aqueducts, begun in 144 B. C. by the praetor Q. Marcius Rex, completed in 140. It was the first high-level aqueduct, having its source in the Sabine Hills at the foot of Monte della Prugna, between Arsoli and Agosta near the thirty-sixth milestone of the Via Valeria, whence it followed the course of the Anio to Tibur, then south to the Campagna near Galliano, underground to the sixth milestone of the Via Latina, then on arches (over which were afterwards carried the specus of the Aquae Iulia and Tepula; cf. RIVI AQVARVM TRIVM below) to the later Porta Praenestina (Maggiore) and Porta Tiburtina (di S. Lorenzo), and so to the Collis Viminalis. From the reservoir here, the water was piped to the Capitol, and on a raised duct to the Caelian. [For the fons novus Antoninianus, see s. v. ANTONINIANVS, p. 353 col. I § c]. R. G. divi Aug. cap. 20 l. 11: ET AQVAM QVAE MARCIA APPELLATVR DVPLICAVI, FONTE NOVO IN RIVVM EIVS INMISSO (sic) = καὶ ἵδωρ τὸ καλούμενον Μάρ[κιον] κ. τ. λ.; VI 1248 = 31559 (Rome, cippus): HAC RIVI AQVAR(VM) TRIVM (i. e. Marciae, Iuliae, Tepulae) EVNT CIPPI POSITI; VI 1246 (Rome, 79): (Titus) RIVOM (sic) AQVAE MARCIAE VETVSTATE DILAPSVM REFECIT, ET AQVAM QVAE IN VSV ESSE DESIERAT REDV-

XIT; VI 1245 (Rome, 212-213): (Caracalla) AQVAM MARCIAM VARIIS KASIBVS (sic) IMPEDITAM ... PERDVENDAM CVRAVIT; VI 1247 (Rome, 3^d): AQVAM M[ARCIA] ... AMPLIA[VIT]; VI 8496, 33729 (Rome): AMICVS, VIL(ICVS) AQVAE MARCIAE.

(4). Aqua Tepula, the fourth aqueduct of Rome, built in 125 B. C. by the censors Cn. Servilius Caepio and L. Cassius Longinus, from springs (now Sorgenti dell'Acqua Preziosa) on the Alban Hills between Frascati and Rocca di Papa. See VI 1248 = 31559 above, § 3 under Aqua Marcia.

(5). Aqua Iulia, built under Augustus by M. Agrippa in 33 B. C., taking its water, like the Aqua Tepula, from the Alban Hills, but from a spring (now Fontanile degli Squarciarelli di Grottaferrata) higher up in the direction of Rocca di Papa. Reference § 4 s. v. Aqua Tepula.

(6). Aqua Virgo, built by Agrippa to supply his thermae in the Campus Martius, and completed in 19 B. C. Drawn from springs near the eighth milestone of the Via Collatina, it entered Rome on the north side under the Pincian Hill (Villa Medici), and so to the thermae behind the Pantheon. VI 1252 (Rome, 46): ARCVS DVCTVS AQVAE VIRGINIS DISTVRBATUS PER C. CAESAREM A FVNDAMENTIS NOVOS FECIT AC RESTITVIT; VI 31564 (Rome, 3^d): (Constantinus Magnus) FORMAM AQV[AE] VIRGINIS VETVSTATE CON-[L]APSAM A FONTIBVS RENOVA[T]AM ... CVRANTE (illo) CVR(ATORE) AQVARVM ET MINIC[IAE].

(7). Aqua Augusta (otherwise, but not in inserr., Alsietina), built by Augustus ca. 10 A. D. to draw water from the Lacus Alsietinus (Lago di Martignano) for his Naumachia in Regio XIV trans Tiberim. VI 31566 = XI 3772a (Caereiae, 1st): [R]IVO AQVAE AVGVSTAE [Q]VAE PERVENIT IN NEMVS CAESARVM.

(8). Aqua Claudia (Augusta) the most magnificent of all the Roman aqueducts, begun in 38 by Caligula and completed by Claudius in 52. Fed by three springs in the Anio valley near those of Aqua Marcia [above, § 3], its course followed the Anio to Tibur, then down to the Campagna near Gallicano, where it bent around the edge of the Alban Hills to a point beneath Frascati, then by a subterranean channel to le Capannelle whence it was carried over lofty arches to its reservoir ad Spem Veterem, and from here piped through the city. VI 1256 (Rome, 52): (Claudius) AQVAS CLAVDIAM EX FONTIBVS QVI VOCABANTVR CAERVLEVS ET CVRTIVS A MILLIARIO XXXV, ITEM ANIENEM NOVAM . . . SVA IMPENSA IN VRBEM PERDVCTAS CVRAVIT; XIV 3530 (S. Gregorio, 82): (ille) . . . (9). Aqua Anio Novus. See s. v. ANIO, § C.

(10). Aqua Traiana, built by Trajan in 109, from springs near the Lacus Sabatinus (Lago di Bracciano), with an underground conduit to the Janiculum, affording a supply of cool water to the trans-Tiberine district. VI 1260 = 31567 = XI 3793 (bet. Rome and Veii, 109): (Traianus) AQVAM TRAIANAM PECVNIA SVA IN VRBEM PERDVXIT.

(11). Aqua Pinciana (if the inser. is genuine, as it seems to be) was probably a special conduit in the Horti Sallustiani on the Pincian. XV 7259 (Rome, fistula plumbea, 4th): AQVA PINCIANA D(OMINI) N(OSTRI) VALENTINIANI AVGVSTI.

(12). Aqua Conclusa, apparently a name given to some place on the Esquiline. VI 33087 (Rome): (illi) ESQVILEIS (sic) AB AQVA CONCLVSA.

(13). Aqua Clusaris, unknown. VI 11533 (Rome): STRVCTVRA AQVAE CLVSARIS.

(14). Aquae Pensiles, a name poetically given, apparently, by a private possessor to a rockery in his garden, with water falling from above over the ferns into the basins. VI 29830 = 36613 (Rome, fresco with garden scenes): AQVAE PENSILES.

Outside of Rome.

(1). Aqua Caerulea. See below (2) Aqua Curtia.

(2). Aqua Curtia, and Aqua Caerulea, two springs of unknown location, the waters of which were conducted into the Aqua Claudia, [q. v. above § (8): VI 1256 (Rome, 52)]. VI 1257 (Rome, 71): (Vespasianus) AQVAS CVRTIAM ET CAERVLEAM PERDVCTAS A DIVO CLAVDIO ET POSTEA INTERMISSAS DILAPSASQVE PER ANNOS NOVEM SVA IMPENSA VRBI RESTITVIT; VI 1258 (Rome, 81): (Titus) AQVAS CVRTIAM ET CAERVLEAM, PERDVCTAS A DIVO CLAVDIO, ET A DIVO VESPASIANO PATRE SVO VRBI RESTITVTAS, CVM A CAPITE AQVARVM A SOLO VETVSTATE DILAPSAE ESSENT, NOVA FORMA REDVCENDAS SVA IMPENSA CVRAVIT.

(3). Aqua Albana, a spring on the slope of the Alban Hills near the modern Marino. XIV 2466 (Castrimoenium, 31): AD RIVOM AQVAE ALBANAE (twice).

(4). Aqua Augusta, a local aqueduct on the slopes of the Alban Hills, between Rocca di Papa and Rocca Priora, which may perhaps have furnished water to the Albanum Domitiani. XIV 2567 (ager Tusculanus, five cippi, 1st): AQVA AVGVSTA. PVT(EVS) P(VBLICVS).

(5). Aquae Albulae. See s. v. ALBVLEVS, ALBVLVS.

(6). Aqua Tiburtina, near Circeii in Latium. X 6427 (Circeii): [illi] CVRAT(ORI) AQVAE TIBVRT(INAE).

(7) Aqua Augusta, at Puteoli in Campania. X 1805 corrected p. 1009 (Puteoli): CVR(ATOR) AQVAE AVGVSTA.

(8). Aqua Iulia, at Rufrae in Campania. X 4833 (Rufrae): QVOD AQVAM IVLIAM PECVNIA SVA ADDVXIT.

(9). Aqua Ventina, at Pinna in the territory of the Vestini. IX 3351 (Pinna): (illi) IIII VIR(I) AQVAM VENTINAM EX S(ENATVS) C(ONSVLTO) CLVDENDAM . . . CVRVRVNT.

(10). Aqua Augusta, at Peltuinum in the territory of the Vestini. IX 4209 (Amiternum, 1st): AQVAM AVGVSTAM IN HONOREM [TI. CAE]SARIS AVGVSTI . . . PELT[VIN(VM)] ADDYXER(VNT).

(11). Aqua Virgo, at Perugia in Etruria. XI 1946 (ibid.): [AQV]AM VIRGINE(M) . . . IN FORO FECIT.

(12). Aqua Ogulnia, a spring near Clusium in Etruria. XI 2097 (Clusium, frgmt.): (ille) NYMPH[IS] AQ[VAE] OGVLNIAE D(ONVM) P(OSVIT).

(13). Aqua Vegetiana, a private aqueduct on the estate of Vegetus near Viterbo in Etruria. XI 3003 (ibid.): MVM-MIVS NIGER VALERIVS VEGETVS CONSVLAR(IS) AQVAM SVAM VEGETIANAM, QVAE NASCITVR IN FVNDQ ANTONIANO . . . DVXIT IN VILLAM SVAM CALVISIANAM, QVAE EST AD AQVAS PASSERIANAS SVAS.

(14). Aquae Passerianae, springs on private property near Viterbo in Etruria, (perhaps the same as the Fluctus Passeris of Martial VI 42, the Aquae Passaris of the Tabula Peutingeriana, and the modern Bagni Giasinelli). See above, Aqua Vegetiana (13).

(15). Aqua Augusta, at Pola in Histria. V 47 (Pola): (ille) AQVAM AVG(VSTAM) INSVPERIOREM (sic) PARTEM COLONIAE ET IN INFERIOREM . . . PERDVXIT.

(16). Aqua Titulensis, at Lambaesis in Numidia. VIII 2661 (Lambaesis, 3^d): AQVAM TITVLENSEM, QV(A)M ANTE ANNOS PLVRIMOS LAMBAESITANA CIVITAS, INTERVERSO DVCTV VI TORRENTIS, AMISERAT.

(17). Aqua Alexandriana, at Lambaesis in Numidia. VIII 2662 (Lambaesis, 3^d): NVMINI AQVAE ALEXANDRIANAE.

(18). Aqua [...]NETENSIS, unknown. VI 17869 (Thamugadi, 174): AQV[AM...] NETENSEM (ille) . . . DEDICAVIT.

(19). Aqua Augusta, at Igabrum in Hispania Baetica. II 1614 (Igabrum): AQVAM AVGVSTAM (ille) . . . PERDVCENDAM . . . CVRAVIT.

(20). Aqua Augusta, at Mellaria in Hispania Baetica. II 2343 (Mellaria): AQVAM AVG(VSTAM) (ille) . . . TESTAMENTO [PERDVCI] IVSSIT.

(21). Aqua Trahi . . . ?, apparently name of an aqueduct at Valentia in Hispania Tarraconensis. II 3747 (Valentia, frgmt.): QVI AQVAM TRAH[...].

V. In place-names derived from medicinal springs and watering-places. [Cf. AQVENSIS].

(1). Aqua Frigida, in eastern Mauretania Caesariensis, at the top of a mountain (Tizē Kafrida) overlooking the Sinus Numidicus, about four miles inland, between Saldae and Choba; now Tala Až-raren. VIII 20215 (Aqua Frigida, 3^d): (ille) CENTENARIVM AQVA FRIGIDA RESTITVIT.

(2). Aquae, (more commonly Vicus Aquensis; See AQVENSIS), or Vicus Aquarum?, medicinal springs and town in Gallia Narbonensis; now Aix-les-Bains near the Lac de Bourget in Savoy. XII 2461 (bet. Augustum and Lacus Lemannus): [POSSESSORIBVS VICI AQV]ARVM, and [DECEM LECTIS VICI AQV]ARVM. [N. b. the readings are conjectural].

(3). Aquae Albulae, sulphur springs and medicinal bathing establishment on the Via Tiburtina about 16 miles from Rome; still called Acque Albule. See s. v. ALBVLEVS, ALBVLVS.

(4). Aquae Aponi, near Patavium; now Abano. See APONENSIS, APONVS.

(5). Aquae (Aureliae), or Civitas Aurelia Aquensis, springs and town in Germania Superior, between the Rhine and Mons Abnoba; now Baden-Baden. [Cf. AQVENSIS]. Milestones, XIII 9113 (near Mogontiacum, 3^d): AB AQVIS LEVG(AE) XVII; 9114 (ibid.): AB AQ(VIS) L(EVGAE) XVII; 9116 (ibid., 213-217): AB AQVIS LEVG(AE) IIII; 9117 (ibid., 220): AB AQ(VIS) LEVG(AE) IIII; 9118 (ibid., 222): AB AQ(VIS) L(EVGAE) IIII; 9119 (ibid., 3^d): A (sic) AQ(VIS) L(EVGAE) IIII; 9125 (near Aquae Mattiacae): [AB] AQ(VIS) L(EVGAE) IIII.

(6). Aquae Balizae, a stopping-place (mansio) in Pannonia Superior, on the highway between Siscia and Mursa, about 50 Roman miles east-northeast of the former and 80 miles west of the latter; now Daruvár. VI 3297 (Rome, 2nd): VLP(IVS) COCCEIVS . . . EX PANNONIA SVP(E-RIORE), NATVS AD AQVAS BALIZAS, PAGO IOVISTA, VICO COC[CON]ETIBVS.

(7). Aquae Briginenses? [if correctly interpreted; cf. BRIGINNV], the medicinal springs of Brignon near Nemausus in Gallia Narbonensis. XII 2913 (ibid.): G(AIVS) AVRELIVS AQVIS B(RIGIN-SENSIBVS?) V(OTVM) S(OLVIT) L(IBENS) M(ERITO).

(8). Aquae Calidae, in Cappadocia near the boundary of Lycaonia, on the highway from Caesarea to Tyana. VI 5076 (Rome, frgmt. of itinerarium): ID(IBVS) OCT(O-BRIBVS) AD AQ(VAS) CALIDA[s], then TYN-NAM, then TYANA(M), then ANDA[BALIM] etc.

(9). Aquae Flaviae, a town with warm springs in Hispania Tarraconensis (Cal-laecia), north-east of Bracara Augusta; now Chaves. [Cf. AQVIFLAVIENSIS]. Note the name treated as indeclinable, II 5682 (Legio VII Gemina): L. CAMPILO PATERNO, EQVIT(I) SECVNDO, AQVAE FLAVIAE. AQVILEIA. A large and flourishing town of Histria at the head of the Adriatic on the river Natiso, fifteen miles from the coast; now Aquileja. It was founded by the Romans in 183 B. C. to block the inroads of the barbarians from the north, a colonia being settled there by a senatorial committee of three (triumviri coloniae deducundae) consisting of the consuls P. Scipio Nasica and C. Flaminius and the ex-praetor L. Manlius Acidinus. [Cf. the first citation below]. Its citizens were enrolled in the Velina tribus. Aquileia furnished a large quota of soldiers to the Roman army [Cf. AQVILEIENSIS].

AQVINCVM. An important city and military headquarters of Pannonia Inferior on the right (west) bank of the Danube, on the highway between Crumerum and Matrica; now (in Hungarian) O'-Buda, (in German) Alt-Ofen. Originally simple military barracks [See CANABAE, CANABENSIS], Aquincum soon grew into a prosperous town, became a municipium in the second century, probably under Hadrian [cf. Aelia Aquincum, VIII 2826 (Lambaesis)], and a colonia under Septimius Severus (Colonia Septimia Aquincum). Its citizens were enrolled in the Sergia tribus. [See AQVINCENSIS].

AQVITANIA. Strictly speaking, the southwestern part of Gaul, comprising the region between the Pyrenees, the ocean (Bay of Biscay, mare Cantabricum), and the river Garumna. From 27 B. C., under Augustus, Aquitania was made into a province: provincia Aquitania or Aquitania (see AQVITANICVS), but as such enlarged to include all the northward region to the river Liger. The province was governed first by legati pro praetore, later by praesides. VI 2497 (Rome): VALERI(A)E IVSTIN(A)E. 10. Ara Matidiae, unknown, perhaps in the valley between the Oppius and the Caelius. VI 31893 (Rome): NOENSES (sic) DE ARA MATIDI(A)E.

11. Ara Marima (Herculis), in the Forum Boarium by the western end of the Circus Maximus; near the present church of S. Maria in Cosmedin. VI 313 (Rome): HIC AD ARAM MAXIMAM.

12. Ara Opis Augustae, on the Vicus Iugarius in the Area Saturni behind the Temple of Saturn. See above, Ara Cereris Matris, no. 1.

13. Ara Pacis Augustae, a monumental structure with its enclosed area, erected by the senate in honor of Augustus after his return from Spain and Gaul in 13 B. C.

It faced the Via Lata (Flaminia), where its remains have been found under the present Palazzo Fiano at the corner of the Corso and Via in Lucina. It was decreed July 4, 13 B. C., and dedicated January 30, 9 B. C. R. G. divi Aug. cap. 12 l. 38: [CV]M EX H[ISPA]NIA GAL[LIA]QVE, REBVS IN HIS P[RO]VINCIS PROSP[E]R[RE] [GEST]I[S], R[OMAM] REDI, TI. NE[R]ONE P. 1. Ara Romae et Augusti (Augustorum, Caesaris), in Gallia Lugudunensis at the point where the Arar flows into the Rhone, in the district known as Pagus Condeate. Dedicated by Drusus in 12 B. C., it became the central point for the imperial cult of the Tres Galliae and the focus of Gallo-Roman national aspirations, where delegates from the sixty tribes of Gaul met for deliberation, and for religious ceremonies under the direction of a sacerdos Romae et Augusti ad Aram, chosen by the concilium Galliarum which met here. The area was neutral ground, the joint property of all the tribes; and altar and temple were maintained at their common expense. Beside the monumental Ara with its inscription and symbolic effigies of each of the sixty tribes, the area contained also a Templum Romae et Augusti q. v. and probably a sacred grove. XIII 1036 (Mediolanum Santonum, 1st): C. IULIVS C. IULI OTIVANEVNI F(I-LIVS) RVFVS, . . . ARBVSTVS. Name of race-horse. Rev.

Arch. X (1907) p. 352 (Hadrumetum, devotio): ARBVSTV (sic, bis).

ARCA, ARKA. Properly "box", "chest", "case"; thence in inserr. "coffin", "sarcophagus"; in metaphorical (Chr.) sense,

"ark"; and hence, "money-chest", "strong-box", "safe", whence (freq. in inserr.), "treasury", "funds". [Cf. AR-CARIVS, ARCELLA, ARCVLA].

E. Arca, in an uncertain, but doubtless commercial or fiscal, sense, occurs in inscr. painted on amphorae, mainly of Spanish origin, found in Monte Testaccio in Rome near the Tiber. It refers probably to the public supplies of provisions for the Capital (arca vinaria, olearia, frumentaria). [Cf. C. I. L. XV p. 561 end]. XV 3643 (1st): IVLIANI. A(RCA) XVI. I. As public property.

A. Originally probably the open (sacred) space around an ara or temple; then extended to other open spaces, as 'squares', market-places and the like, thus assuming a topographical value as indicating parts of the city.

a. Area Aedis Apollinis, generally called simply Area Apollinis, the great Square of Augustus' Temple of Apollo on the Palatine. V 32327 (Rome, Comm. Lud. Saec., 204) l. 23: [IN PALATIO] IN AREA AEDIS APOLLINIS.

b. Area Apollinis in the Regio I, exact position unknown. VI 29844¹ (Rome, Forma Urbis Romae, frgmt.): [A]REA APO[LLINIS].

c. Area Callisti?, wholly unknown, but probably to be understood instead of Ara, which appears on a bronze collare, XV 7193 (Rome?, †): TENE ME NE FVGIA(M), ET REVOCA ME AD DOMNV(M) (sic) EVVIVENTIV(M) IN AR(E)A CALLISTI.

d. Area Capitolina or Capitoli, the square about the Temple of Juppiter Optimus Maximus on the Capitol. VI 2065 (Rome, Arval, 87) col. I l. 18: EODEM DIE IBIDEM (i. e. in Capitolio in pronao Iovis Optimi Maximi) IN AREA.

e. Area Hortorum Lollianorum, a square in the Lollian Gardens, on the borders of Regions IV and VI, south of the Thermae Diocletianae; between the top of the modern streets Via Viminale and Via Cavour, near the Stazione Centrale, about where the Hotel Continental now stands. VI 31284 (Rome, 1st): TI. CLA(VDI) CAISARIS (sic) AVG(VSTI) GER(MANICI) AREA HORT(ORVM) LOLL(IANORVM).

f. Area Macari, in Regio V, site unknown. XV 7174 (Rome, bronze collare): IANVARIVS DICOR. SERVVS SVM DEXTRI EXCEPTORIS SENATVS, QVI MANET IN REGIONE V, IN AREA MACARI. May this be referred to in the frgmt. of the Forma Urbis Romae, VI 29844²⁹: AREA M[...]?

g. Area Radicaria, as its name implies, a special market-place; on the Via Appia near the Baths of Caracalla. VI 29844³ (Rome, Forma Urbis Romae): AREA RADICARIA. [Cf. Area Frumentaria at Uzelis, § m below].

h. Area Saturni, of the great Temple of Saturn at the foot of the Clivus Capitolinus; the area was probably behind the temple, along the Vicus Iugarius. I 636 = XIV 153 (Ostia, B. C.): NEGOTIATORES EX AREA SATVRNI; VIII 9249 (Rusguniae): (illi) [IN]DEQVE PRO MERITIS ACTIBVS AD DEFENSIONEM POPVLI A(V)REA SATVRNI IN SACR(A)M VRBEM PROMOTO.

ARELATA. See ARELATE.

ARELATE. An important town of Gallia Narbonensis, in the territory of the Saluvi on the Rhodanus, just below the point where the Petit Rhone leaves the main stream, on the road from Ugernum (9 miles) to Ernaginum (6-7 miles). Now Arles. Julius Caesar had a colonia of veterans (evidently of the Legio Sexta, hence Sextani Arelatenses, q. v.) settled there, after his Alexandrian war, by Tiberius Claudius Nero, father of the (afterwards) emperor Tiberius, whence the colony was called, after Tiberius, Colonia Iulia Paterna, as below. Its citizens were enrolled in the Teretina tribus.

ARMENA. As name of battleship, XI 102 (Ravenna): M. TITIVS SEVERVS, III (= triere) ARMENA.

ARMENIA. (Ἀρμενία). A vast, hilly region of Asia, bordering on Asia Minor; divided by the upper course of the Euphrates into two unequal parts: on the west, Armenia Minor (ἡ Μικρὰ Ἀρμενία) between Pontus, Cappadocia and the Euphrates; and on the east, Armenia Maior, or ‘Armenia properly so called’ (ἡ ἰδίως λεγόμενη Ἀρμενία), roughly bounded by Pontus, Colchis and the Caucasus Mountains on the north, Media on the east, Mesopotamia on the south, and the Euphrates on the west. In 69 B. C., under the reign of Tigranes (Dikran), who had united the two portions, the country was overrun by the Roman army under Lucullus [Cf. Elogium Luculli, below], and again in 66 B. C. by Pompeius Magnus [See C. I. L. I p. 460, XXVII, Acta Triumph. Capitol, where the name Armenia is surely supplied in the break]; after which the two Armenias became separate kingdoms under the suzerainty of Rome. Augustus, though he might well have reduced all Armenia to a province, chose to leave it divided into two vassal states, giving the western part (‘Minor’) to Archelaus, king of Cappadocia, in 20 B. C., and the eastern region (‘Maior’) to Tigranes son of Artavasdes and grandson of the former Tigranes (Cf. R. G. divi Aug., below); but later, as a result of dynastic troubles, he despatched an army (1 B. C.) under Gaius Caesar, who placed on the throne of Armenia Maior Ariobarzanes, son of the Median king Artavasdes. In the siege of Artagira, Gaius received the wound from which he afterwards died [Cf. fasti of Cupra Maritima, below]. Further dynastic troubles during Nero’s reign led to the expedition of Domitius Corbulo (58-60) [Cf. XIV 3608, below]. During the latter half of the first century, Armenia Minor was joined to Cappadocia under Roman rule, while the eastern region was left to its fate, mainly under Parthian influence, until Trajan in 114 reduced it to the form of a province governed by Legati Augusti pro Praetore, which fell away again into oriental anarchy on the accession of Hadrian in 117, after which its history is that of a foreign borderland. Meanwhile Armenia Minor continued to be under Roman control, and after Diocletian was governed by a Dux Armeniae [Cf. VI 3526, below]. (Cf. ARMENA, ARMENIACVS, ARMENICVS, ARMENIVS).

In inscr., only in the sense of military insignia given to soldiers and officers of the rank and file (milites, equites, centuriones) as a reward for valiant deeds of arms. Such armillae were bestowed usually (always in the later period) in pairs, one for each arm (hence almost always plur.), and were of silver, rarely of gold. They are associated with torques and phalerae (generally in the order: torques, armillae, phalerae; cf. citations), and sometimes with coronae (aureae, murales, vallares), and with hastae purae and vexilla. The earliest instance dates from the Social War; under the Republic such insignia were bestowed by the commanding general (imperator), under the Empire by the emperor himself (Tiberius, Claudius, Vespasian, Domitian, Trajan, Hadrian, Antoninus Pius: — the latest example). — Bull. ARNENSIS, ARNIENSIS tribus. [The variant Arniensis is probably formed on the analogy of Aniensis, but cf. CIRCIENSIS beside CIRCENSIS]. One of the 31 tribus rusticae of Roman citizens; instituted, along with the Sabatina, Stellatina, and Tromentina q. v., in 387 B. C. The name was derived from the ancient name (*Aro?) of the stream now called Arrone, which empties the waters of the Lacus Sabatinus (Lago di Bracciano) into the Tyrrhenian Sea south of Fregennae (Maccaresae). The district originally assigned to this tribe was that portion of the then conquered southern Etruria between the still independent territory on the north, and the territories of Capena, Veii and Falerii on the south. After the Social War (89 B. C.), the towns of the Marrucini (Teate) and Frentani (Anxanum, Histonium, Iuvanum) were enrolled in the tribe, as well as the Etruscan Blera, Clusium and Polimartium (?), the Umbrian Oriculum, and the Gallic Brixellum. Augustus finally added a number of cities of Africa Proconsularis (Agbia, Carthago, Curubis, Neapolis, Thabraca, Thibursicum Bure, Thignica, Thuburbo Maius?, Thuburnica, Thugga, Uci Maius) and of Mauretania (Saldae, Tupusuctu). The word ARNENSIS, like ANIENSIS q. v., is generally treated as an adj. and declined (nom., dat.) with the personal name of which it forms a part; and stands regularly between filiation and cognomen. ARRETIVM. An ancient and important city of Etruria, originally probably one of the twelve of the Etruscan Confederation, occupying a strong position at the foot of the Appenines near the headwaters of the Arnus, 37 miles north of Clusium and 51 miles south of Florentia by the Via Cassia; now Arezzo. After long Roman control and complete Latinization, Arretium definitely received Roman citizenship in 90 B. C., its citizens being enrolled in the Pomptina Tribus q. v. The inhabitants were subdivided into three classes, viz. Arretini Veteres, of the old Etruscan town (cf. XI 1849 s. v. ARRETINVS), A. Fidentini (See FIDENTINVS), representing descendents of colonists settled there by Sulla after the overthrow of Marius, with whose party the Arretini Veteres had allied themselves, and A. Iulienses, presumably the coloni of Julius Caesar and their descendents. Arretium was the seat of important pottery-industries, whose moulded vases ("Arretine Ware"), with (earlier) black and (later) red glaze, formed the staple table-crockery of the less well-to-do of the whole Roman world, and were copied and imitated in the provinces (esp. Gaul, Germany, Britain); and its territory produced wine and grain, (cf. XV 5237 s. v. ARRETINVS).

ARVAGASTAE Matronae. Three (so figured on the stone) German Matron-goddesses, [Cf. MATER, MATRONA], of the district about Cologne. XIII 7855 (Müddersheim, Germania Inf.): <M>ATRONIS ARVAGASTIS, A. VETTIUS VICTOR [...].

ARVALIS. "Of the plowed fields" (arva). Only used of the "Arval Brothers" (Fratres Arvales), whose ancient cult (originally Ambarvalia) of the Dea Dia (in concept = Ceres), handed down from primitive times with rites intended to propitiate the deities of the harvest and assure the success of the crops, had fallen into disuse under the later Republic, and was officially reorganized by Augustus as a highly honorary and aristocratic priestly association, in which, upon the ancient traditional rites, was superposed the cult of the Imperial Family. The collegium, when complete, consisted of twelve members, to which the Emperor might, apparently, be added as an extra member, tho he generally took part as one of the twelve; and the Fratres were always men of the highest standing in the State, chosen by the existent membership (cooptati). The seat of the cult was the Lucus Deae Diae on the banks of the Tiber just beyond the fifth milestone of the Via Campana, but meetings were held also in Rome, in various public buildings and at the house of the presiding magister or promagister. Our knowledge of the organization and its rites is derived almost wholly from the acta, regularly carved on marble slabs and in large part preserved, dating from the reign of Augustus (A. D. 14) to that of Gordianus III (241) [See VI 2023-2119, 32338-32398]. The Collegium was presided over by a Magister, regularly elected by the body, in whose absense one of the members, delegated by him, acted as vice-president (promagister); besides whom there was an official Flamen, and in his absense a substitute (proflamen); with calatores and (servi) publici as assistants of the members.

[N. B. The following article covers only such activities of the Brotherhood as are shown by the inscr. in which the word Arvalis is preserved. Cf. also s. v. FRATER].

ARVERNI, (and sing. ARVERNVS), the important and powerful Gallic tribe of Aquitania, whose territories extended from the Mons Cevenna and the Aedui to the Liger (mod. Auvergne). Their chief town was Augustonemetum q. v. (in inserr. also called Civitas Arvernorum), the modern Clermont-Ferrand, department of Puy-de-Dôme. Their national deity was Arvernus, or Mercurius Arvernus (see below). They were conquered by the Romans in 121 B. C. (cf. Acta Triumph., below), but long remained a quasi-independent state. [Forms, ARVERNEIS, AVERNVS, ADVERNVS; abbrev., ARVERN., ARVE., ARV., AR., below].

a. The tribe, the people. I p. 460 = I² p. 49 (Rome, Acta Triumph. Capitol.) A. V. C. 634 = B. C. 121: Q. FABIVS Q. AEMILIANI F. Q. N ... AS. The standard unit of Roman measures; the coin, a bronze piece, after 89 B. C. (Lege Papiria Semunciararia) equivalent to the original semuncia ($\frac{1}{24}$ of the libra, or as libralis, of 327.45 grams), hence weighing normally ca. 13.65 grams, or 210 $\frac{1}{2}$ English grains, although, being token-currency, it seldom actually comes up to the full weight. The as of the Empire was therefore $\frac{1}{2}$ of the dupondius, $\frac{1}{4}$ of the sestertius, $\frac{1}{8}$ of the quinarius, $\frac{1}{16}$ of the denarius, and $\frac{1}{400}$ of the (denarius) aureus, and was a coin of about the size of (but evidently of higher purchasing-power than) the modern halfpenny, sou or soldo. With the depreciation of the coinage, esp. from Severus Alexander, the as ceased to be minted (under Diocletian and Maximian) toward the end of the third century.

ASCIA. A workman's tool or implement; a name applied to very varied tools used by carpenters, masons and stonecutters for the working, in the rough, of wood or stone, or the pulling down of masonry, [cf. ἄξις; Ital. ascia, asce; Fr. hache; Engl. ax, hatchet, etc.], and in the inserr. specifically for a mason's combined hammer and pick, such as is used today in Rome under the name of martella or martellina, viz. an iron tool with a socket into which is set a stout wooden handle, about 10 inches (ca. 25 cm.) in length. The head has one extremity flattened into hammer form, and the other, curved, provided with a flat cutting-edge, such as is shown by original examples and by designs on the monuments. [Cf. Daremberg et Saglio, Dict., s. v. Ascia for figure]. In the inserr. the word has, however, a symbolic sense, and even the form of the ascia is quite conventional, the cutting-edge being drawn parallel to the handle in a way that would be wholly unserviceable in practice; a fact which demonstrates clearly that the use of the formula sub ascia dedicare, in all its variants as below, has little to do with the actual mason's work on the tomb, albeit its origin is derived from the specific tool, as is shown by the juxtaposition of the perpendicularum, or plummet, in several inserr. of Gallia Narbonensis (cf. XII 1949, 2051, 2252, 2697 and indices p. 965). The meaning of the formula sub ascia in connection with the dedication of the tomb has given rise to numberless conjectures, and in the lack of any certain explanation, the common opinion has been that it implied a new burial-place, of recent construction, and hence sub ascia as practically still in charge of the builders. But this hypothesis seems untenable, and probably Hirschfeld (XII p. 256) is right in assuming a deeper religious meaning, to us unknown, involving the divine protection of the tomb and the invocation of divine wrath upon its violators, of all which the ascia was but a symbol (cf. Pauly-Wissowa, suppl. p. 151). Symbol and formula, in fact, are practically confined to regions of Celtic origin, and the conception is doubtless derived from Celtic mythology: — Gallia Lugudunensis, esp. Segusiavi, Ara Romae et Augusti, Lugudunum (extremely freq.), Ambarri, Matisco, Cavillonum, Augustodunum; and Narbonensis from Arelate to Genava, esp. Vasio, ager Vocontiorum, Valentia, Vienna (freq.), Gratianopolis, Augustum; and where the formula is found sporadically in other parts of the Empire [as at Burdigala in Aquitania (XIII 609), Bonna in Germania (XIII 8066), Ossonoba in Hispania (II 5144), near Saluzzo in Gallia Cisalpina (V 7645), at Rome (VI 8931, 10921, 36287), Litternum in Campania (X 3717), Acruvium? in Dalmatia (III 1712), and in Mauretania Sitifensis (VIII 8414 = 20321)] it is clearly an exportation of Celto-Gallic sentiment. In very many inserr. the symbol is found without the formula, which it implies. The number and relative position of conventional asciae represented may have no symbolic importance, but it is worthy of note that in by far the greater number of instances it appears singly, and generally (ca. 65 per cent) resting on its left side, with handle down and hammer-end up; less often (ca. 35 per cent) in the other direction (right side, handle down); in a few cases it is upright, with handle down and hammer-end r. (as XIII 1975 at Lugudunum), or l. (as XII 1458 at Vasio, 3453 at Nemausus); with handle upwards, in inverted position, it is rare (exx. XIII 2287 at Lugudunum, 2589 at Matisco, A. D. 224). It usually appears at the top of the inscr., often between the letters D · M (= Dis Manibus), but not seldom at the bottom (exx. XIII 1865, 1884, 1916, 1919, 1997, 2096, 2287 at Lugudunum, 2509, 2554 among the Ambarri, 2589 at Matisco, XII 1390, 1458 at Vasio, 1768 at Valentia, 1920, 1949 at Vienna, 2244 at Gratianopolis), and rarely at r. or l., sometimes in the 'wing' of the 'tabella ansata' that forms the cornice of the inscr. (as XIII 2191, 2283 at Lugudunum, 2602 at Matisco, XII 1949 at Vienna, 2498 bet. Augustum and Lacus Lemannus). Two asciae symmetrically turned toward each other, handle down, hammer upward, exx. XIII 1854, 1876, 1893, 1901, 1910, 1983, 2085, 2182, 2214, 2297 at Lugudunum; two asciae symmetrically turned away from each other, handle down, hammer upward, as XIII 1942 at Lugudunum; two asciae leaning to the left, on opposite sides of the inscr., as XIII 2129 at Lugudunum; or leaning to the right, as XII 137 (Seduni), XIII 2239 (Lugudunum); three asciae, two leaning r., one l., handle down, hammer-end up, XIII 1888 (Lugudunum).

ASIA. (Ἀσία). In inscr. Asia refers not to the continent as a whole (unless indeed Mommsen's conjecture be correct, that XI 6721^{36, 37} (Perusia, glandes missiles, 41-40 B. C.): LVFINASIA, 6721³⁸ (ibid.): LVINASIA are to be interpreted: L(OCVS) V(OBIS), F(VGITIVI), IN ASIA, L(OCVS) V(OBIS) IN ASIA, in which case reference is, of course, to the vast barbarian regions of Asia beyond the Roman dominions), nor to Asia Minor in general; but only to the Roman province of that name, originally comprising the domains of the Attalid kings of Pergamus, bequeathed to the Roman people by Attalus III in 133 B. C. After the suppression of the uprising of Aristonicus (131-129 B. C.), the province was definitely organized by the Consul Manius Aquillius. It varied in extent at different periods, but in its greatest extension it included Mysia, Lydia, Phrygia, Caria and the Ionian coast-cities with their territories, all the islands lying off the coast from Rhodes on the south to Tenedos on the north, and of the Cyclades the islands of Astypalaea and Amorgos. Thus the continental portion was bounded on the north by the Hellespont, the Propontis as far east as the mouth of the Rhyndacus, and Bithynia (Mons Olympus), on the east by Galatia, Lycaonia and Pisidia, on the south by Pisidia, Lycia and the sea, and on the west by the Aegaeen Sea. Asia was thus one of the richest and most fertile of the Roman provinces. Aside from the Provincial administration, the levying of imperial taxation, and the settlement of Latin colonies at Alexandria Troas and Parium, the maximum of local autonomy was granted to the Grecian towns. Asia was, like Africa q. v., a 'Senatorial Province', under the supreme government of a Proconsul, assisted in a military capacity by Legati pro praetore. For other and later officials, and subordinate governmental employees, see below § II. (Cf. ASIANVS, ASIARCHA, ASIATICVS).

ASSIFORANVS. Adj., combined, according to Mommsen, of as and forum; acc. to Huebner and Buecheler, from assus and forum. On the former supposition, which has more likelihood, the munera quae assiforana appellantur would be travelling gladiatorial shows, managed by a lanista for private gain (of himself — cfr. the circumforanus lanista of Suet. Vitell. cap. 12 — or of an editor, his employer), which move from town to town, where permission is obtained from the local authorities to erect temporary wooden stalls and seats in the Forum, or to hire the permanent show-place, if such existed, and to charge an admission-fee of an as. Naturally this was only an entrance-price, with right to look on from any casual point of vantage, and reserved seats were charged extra; otherwise the maximum expense allowed by the law (30,000 sesterces = 120,000 asses) would have involved an enormous number of spectators, or a long series of performances, before any profit would accrue to the impresario. In the second case, they would be similar travelling shows held in the various fora with temporary, uncovered seats exposed to the sun. [With assa = "hot" in this sense, cf. the American slang-term "bleachers"]. II 6278 Senatus Consultum Italicense, 176-7)

ALA § 8 (p. 217).

ASTVRIA. The country of the Astures, q. v., an extensive region in north-western Hispania Tarraconensis, extending from the Cantabrian Sea on the north to the Vettones on the south, and from Callaecia (Gallaecia) on the west to the Cantabri and Vaccaeii on the east. Its northern portion (the Spanish province of las Asturias) was mountainous and wild, and famous for its productive gold-mines; the southern part, a fertile pastureland that produced the asturcones, a fine breed of small, swift horses [cf. ASTVRCONARIVS], much esteemed in the circus, and probably also in private use and in the cavalry-squadrons of the Roman army [see ASTVRES, IV § B]. The capital-city was Asturica (Augusta), q. v., center of the administrative government and seat of the chief judicial authority of Asturia and Callaecia (Legatus Augusti Iuridicus, Leg. Aug. et Iuridicus), whose district was known as Conventus Asturum or Asturicensis, q. v. The chief military center, receiving its name from the legion permanently quartered there, was Legio Septima, now Leon. [Form ASTYRIA; abbrev. ASTVR., below].
